We should not help them out as we are direct competitors. Further, we need to make sure we don't do anything that lets Sun claim we are advancing the "Java platform".

I can return this call - we need to drill them on whether we have a license to EnterpriseJava. That also ensures they don't learn anything. I will call tomorrow.

we can help review if you like, but how to approach is up to you guys. also, we should probably get them focused on a single contact in your organization -- i've gotten the feeling recently that they are spamming all contacts they know, esp. about enterprise/transactions/database stuff.

Importance: High

I got a call from Shel Finkelstein from Java Soft today. He has asked if we would like to like to review material they are producing regarding Enterprise Java Beans. I told Shel that I would contact the appropriate person in Microsoft to see if we are interested in doing this. I suspect that one of you is likely to be that person. Shel can be reached at 408-343-1873. Please let me know who, if anyone, is going to pick this up. I promised that I would get back to Shel promptly.

If you wish, I can get more details from Shel. I only got a voice message from him and left a voice message in return. Although I am happy to call him, it might be more efficient if one of you talked with him directly.
