

Customs director Bock went underground: Twitter account deleted

by world today news · June 10, 2021 · No Comments

Customs staff ask themselves: Where is Director Bock? He deleted his Twitter account and no longer communicates internally

The crisis at customs has now also been the subject of Swiss television. But the controversial customs director has gone underground.

Christian Bock speaks about the disposition on the border with France in the cantons of Neuchâtel and Jura. He wears a bulletproof vest and a gun.

In the Federal Customs Administration (EZV) under Director Christian Bock, there is a climate of fear. CH Media reported on this in a series of articles in April, based on numerous discussions with civilian customs officers and members of the border guards. For fear of reprisals and disadvantages up to and including dismissal, everyone wanted to remain anonymous.